The Workingman's Wife.

"Don't fall in love with her, Junius."

"Your caution comes too late, old man. I'm in love with her already."

Franklin Bartley looked solemnly at Dr. Junius Dale; shook his head as if to say, "'Tis true, 'tis pity; pity 'tis, 'tis true."

"My dear fellow," said Bartley, the aged mentor of the pair, "you cannot more afford such a wife than you can afford a steam yacht or an ivory mounted billiard table."

"There's no occasion to tell me that," mournfully replied Dr. Dale. "I'm quite aware of it already. If I was rich I'd marry Miss Clarke to-morrow — always providing that she thought me worthy of acceptance; but as I am only a struggling young doctor, I'll do my best to keep away from her fascinations in the future."

"A sensible decision," observed Bartley.

"But she is so pretty," yearningly remarked Dr. Dale.

"Granted."

"And she sings like a nightingale."

"She ought to, with all the cultivation that her voice has received."

"And she has such a winning way with her."

"What difference does that make to you?" said Bartley. "Haven't you resolved that hereafter she is to be nothing to you?"

"Y-yes; but—"

"Stick to your colors then, man," cried Bartley. "Clissy Clarke is nothing on earth but a society belle. What you want is a helpful, willing, working bee of a wife—one who can aid you with heart and hand to climb life's hill. You saw Miss Clarke at the Winfield masquerade last night, in white satin and pearls?"

"And very beautiful she looked," cried the young physician, firing suddenly up at the recollection of Miss Clarke's auburn hair, all twisted with ropes of seed pearl, and violet blue eyes, sparkling with girlish animation.

"Did she look like a poor man's wife?"

"Not a bit of it."

"Then be warned," said Bartley, shortly. "Remember the old story of the moth scorching its wings in the candle flame."

Dr. Dale was silent. He had promised himself the pleasure of a call on Clarissa Clarke that very afternoon.

There was something about the girl that attracted him with almost magnetic force. The tender light of her eyes, the sweet intonation of her voice, the rosy flushes of color that overspread her cheek when he talked to her, were all separate attractions; and yet he knew that he, like the hero of French romance, was "a poor young man."

He recollected, now, that he had even said something to Clissy about going to the Clarke cottage that day.

"It won't do," he said to himself. "I had better keep away."

And so, instead of following the dearest inclination of his heart, he betook himself with Spartan resolve to the public library.

"I'll read up that case on the investigation of cholera microbes," he thought. "If a man expects to make any mark in his profession, he must keep posted up in these modern discoveries of science."

So he disappeared into one of the alcoves of the library, with his medical quarto and his memorandum book, and set to work in good earnest.

But he had not fairly entered into the merits of the microbe question when the twitter of sweet girl voices from the adjoining alcoves struck upon his ear.

"Oh, Clissy Clarke!" said one. "I called for her, and she wouldn't come. It was baking day, and there was Clissy up to her elbows in flour and spices."

"Well, I never!" said the other, with a giggle.

"Oh, she does all the housework," said the first speaker, scornfully, "like any hired servant. Even the fine washing—for they only keep one little bound-girl—and Mr. Clarke won't wear a shirt unless Clissy has ironed it."

"How does she find time for her music and oil painting?" asked the second.

"Oh, she rises at dawn. She says the best time of the working-day is before breakfast. She finishes the housework, sews for the family—"

"Makes all her own dresses, don't she?"

"Yes, and her mother's too. That satin dress she wore at the party last night was her grandmother's bridal gown made over, and the pearls were borrowed from Miss Layton. It don't cost her anything to dress. She'll take the horridest old affair and remodel it with a scrap of ribbon or a panel of velvet until you'd think it was made by a French dress-maker. I declare, I wish I had her knack. Papa is always grumbling about my bills. But that ain't all. Do you know, she gives Bessie Layton music lessons, and earns quite a nice little income for herself? And she writes book reviews and things for the newspapers, and keeps Mr. Clarke in books that way."

"Dear me!" said the other, with a yawn, "who at the party last night would think it?"

"Humph!" remarked the other, "She'll live and die an old maid, see if she don't. Such girls always do. Come, here are our novels at last. Let's go."

The perfumed silken flounces rustled out of the library; the sound of chattering voices died away, and still Dr. Dale sat, with his pencil in his hand, staring down at his memorandum book. It seemed that the gloomy veil which dropped between him and his future life were lifted. In his heart he could have blessed the agile tongues of these idle, gossiping girls.

Clissy, then, was no mere butterfly, but a true, noble-hearted working-girl!

He carried back the ponderous medical tome to the assistant librarian.

"Much obliged," he remarked, succinctly.

"Got through with it pretty quick, haven't you?" said the assistant librarian.

"Yes, I've had very good luck this morning," said the doctor, cheerfully.

He went straightway to the cottage on the outskirts on the village, where Clarissa Clarke lived. An apple-cheeked little brother came to the door to answer the knock.

"Yes, Clissy's at home," said he. "But she's fixing a chicken for papa's dinner. And then she's got my trousers to mend. Clissy can't come up stairs."

But Dr. Dale laughingly pushed his way across the threshold.

"I'll come in and wait," said he.

And in five minutes Clissy came in, looking even prettier, if it were a possible thing, in her calico morning dress than she had done in the white satin and pearls on the evening before

How he managed to speak out the dearest wish of his heart, Dr. Dale never quite knew. He had prepared a form of words on the way, but they vanished utterly out of his mind when the eventful moment came. He could only remember that she stood before him in all her fresh, young beauty, like a human apple-blossom, and that he loved her.

But after he had her hand in his, one arm carelessly thrown around her waist, he told her of the morning occurrence.

"Until then, dearest," he said, "I looked upon you as a sort of unattainable luxury—a star to be worshiped afar off only. I knew that I was nothing more than a village doctor, with more ambition than practice—for the present, at least. But now I feel that I may venture to hope. Will you run the risk of sharing my scanty fortunes, Clissy?"

"Willingly, Junius," she answered, looking up into his face with her frank blue eyes. "And to tell you the truth," she added, smiling a little shyly, "I'm almost glad that you are not a rich man. Because, dear, I shall be so glad, so proud to help you a little in my humble way."

So they were married. A few weeks subsequent to their bridal, Franklin Bartley married an heiress.

"It's like Bartley," said Doctor Dale. "He always looks out for the main chance."

At the end of five years, however, Franklin Bartley came back to his native village, a moody, and disappointed man. His money had all been dissipated in unwise speculations, his wife had returned to her friends, minus her fortune.

"'A young man married is a young man marred,'" he quoted, gloomily. "Except, perhaps, in Dale's case. He seems to have grown rich by degress. And he is happy, too, even in the obscurity of a country physician's life."

"Thanks to my helpful little wife," said Dale, with a glance of pride and tenderness toward Clissy, who sat on the doorstep with two chubby children playing about her knee. "We have worked together, Clissy and I, and our reward has not been withheld from us."

A white man from away down South in the Okeechobee Lake region came up to Gainesville last week on business at the United States Land Office. While there he saw the first ice he had ever seen. He manifested great interest in the frigid substance, and put a half-pound lump in his pants pocket to take home to his family. He soon took it out of his pocket, however, and as he did so said: 'I'm afeered it will spile my terbacker.'

Applications for Passes.

When a reporter entered the office of an official of one of the trunk lines in New York recently, he found seated in an armchair a young woman with a pretty little girl in her arms. The young mother was crying softly behind her handkerchief. When a clerk asked what she wanted she said she had been deserted by her husband, and she wanted a pass so as to overtake him and made him support her and the little girl. She was positive her husband had gone to a large city several hundred miles from New York, and if she could only get a pass to go on and catch him she was sure they would be happy together again. She said her parents lived 200 hundred miles in another direction. Her request for a pass was denied, and she was advised to go home to her parents.

'Then you refuse to give me a pass?' she asked, as she put her handkerchief in her pocket and straightened herself up in the arm-chair. 'You will not help me in trying to find my husband?'

'No, madam, we cannot aid you,' was the polite reply. 'It is against the rules.'

Her cheeks grew several shades redder, and her bright blue eyes snapped as she arose and stalked out of the office.

'That kind of a woman is a perfect nuisance to us,' said one of the railroad officials. 'We have sometimes a dozen or fifteen of them a day. That woman was a fraud. She wanted a pass to go visiting on, and her story about desertion was false. Her cheeks were plump and full of color, and her eyes were bright and clear. Now if she had been deserted by her husband she would have worried and cried so that she would have looked as if she had not slept for a week. I've seen too many cases of this kind before. One of the most curious things in connection with applications for free trips is the fact that the officers of all the charitable associations within a radius of 300 miles labor under the impression that our road is run as part and parcel of each one of their societies. They pester the life nearly out of us for passes to all points for persons they are interested in or whom they want to favor. Just glance over this drawer of letters and see what you think of the requests of some of the writers.'

The reporter saw in the drawer nearly 100 letters from benevolent associations and charitable institutions begging for trip passes to all parts of the country. One letter asked for a pass for a thousand-mile trip and return for four persons, on the ground that the writer had been assistant secretary of a benevolent society in a neighborboring city for several years.

"That is our charitable drawer. Look over our official drawer,' said the railroad man; 'it is the next one above.'

This drawer was packed with letters from municipal, county, and United States officials of all kinds.

'What do you do with these applications?' inquired the reporter, tapping the two drawers; 'do you grant any of them?'

'Yes, we grant the request of those who we think are entitled to passes,' was the reply; 'but it is very hard work sometimes to tell when to give them or when we ought to refuse. The reasons given why passes should be issued are countless. We very frequently have fellows come in here who tell pathetic stories of how they have been robbed of their last cent in the city, and they must have a pass to go home on. Every one of these will solemnly promise to send the money to us by the first mail after reaching home. They never send us the money, and they do not expect to send it when they promise. Another class of persons who bore us for passes are our personal friends. Hundreds of persons who have no claim upon the company, excepting their friendship or acquaintance with one of its officers, are constantly annoying us with requests for trip and annual passes. Men who say they are veterans of the war are here daily to get passes. If we are convinced by their documents of the truth of their statements we give them a trip pass. The laugh was raised at my expense a few weeks ago. A fellow who produced papers showing an honorable record of four years' service in the war asked me for a trip pass to a Western city. He had a heavy cold and looked very weak. I gave him a pass, and he left with a hearty 'God bless you, sir, for your kindness to an old soldier.' Within fifteen minutes he was detected trying to sell the pass in the depot. He had never seen a Confederate soldier. Men and women who have just been discharged from the hospitals in and around New York come here at the rate of a dozen a day, and want us to pass them to towns or cities where they have friends. See that pile of letters I have to sign. They are in answer to requests for passes. They are from clergymen, hotel clerks, freight shippers, and persons who say they have been injured on our line. If we have an accident on the road of the most thrilling nature, within a week several persons will want passes on the ground that they were hurt on that particular occurrence. There are few persons in this country who cannot rake up some reason why they should not have an occasional free pass over a railroad line.'

Josh Billings and the Drummer.

The late Josh Billings was once on a passenger train bound for his old home at Lanesborough, Massachusetts. On the train were several commercial travellers, who, to while away the time, proposed a game of whist. A fourth man was wanted, and a gentleman sitting near was requested to take a hand.

'No; I do not play. But there is an old fellow who is a capital player; try him'—pointing to the 'old fellow,' who sat demurely on the seat in front.

'Good player, is he?' said the commercial man. 'Then we'll have some fun with old Hayseed;' and accosting the quiet, farmer-like passenger the young man, whose cheek was his fortune, blandly said: 'My venerable friend, we would like to have you take a hand in a game of cards with us, just to while away the time. Will you oblige us?

Looking the young man in the face a moment, 'old Hayseed' answers, 'Yaas, we'll be there in about three hours.'

'You don't understand, my friend; we want you to take a hand—'

'Ya-as, the stand o' corn is very good—uncommen handsome.'

The commercial man was annoyed. 'Speak a little louder,' suggested the gentleman in the seat behind: 'he is somewhat hard of hearing.'

'My friend!' shouted the young fellow, 'will—you—take—a—hand—in—a—game?'

'Ya-as, game is uncommon plenty; all you want is—'

'Oh, go to the deuce! You're as deaf as a post!' and the man of cheek subsided, amid the laughter of his companions.

When Lanesborough was reached, 'old Hayseed' arose to depart, when he quietly handed his card to the commercial man, who sat glum in his seat, and in a particulaly comical way remarked: 'Young man, when you travel on your cheek, don't get hay-seed in your eye. See?'

The young fellow glanced at the card. The superscription was—'Josh Billings.'

Josh got off the train, and the man of cheek had to find a seat in another car to escape the 'run' on him by his companions.—Harper's Magazine.

The Laugh was on the Clerk.

'Ef it ain't writin' an' it ain't printin', wat kinder stamps do you put on?' queried an urchin, whose head barely reached to the window ledge, at the postoffice yesterday.

The clerk at the stamp window smiled at the youngster's question, and winked in evident enjoyment at the by standers. Then he said:

'Sonny, I suppose you've got third-class matter?'

'I dunno,' was the dubious reply.

The clerk laughed, and repeated his winks at the interested spectators who had overheard the dialogue.

'Well,' he said finally, and mimicking the boy's manner, 'ef it ain't writin' an' it ain't printin', I guess we'll have to call it third-class matter and send it along for you pretty cheap. What does it weigh?'

'Nuthin',' said the boy, as his mouth stretched into a grin that threatened to fracture his ears.

'Nothing?' repeated the clerk.

'Yump,' muttered the boy, reefing his smile slightly.

In that case, then, sonny,' said the clerk, with hilarious animation, we'll send your package through for nothing.'

'Sure pop?' questioned the boy, as he edged back a little from the window.

'Sure pop,' repeated the clerk. 'I pledge the honor of the government. Hand over the matter that weighs nothing.'

'Here it is, mister,' and the boy pushed an inflated toy balloon through the window opening. 'Mind yer, I'll hold the gov'ment 'sponsible—yer said so.' And then the boy and spectators did the laughing and the winking, and the clerk devoted himself to chunks of language which weighed more than the mailable four-pounds allowed by law.

'The candles you sold me last were very bad,' said Jerrold, to a tallow chandler. 'Indeed, sir, I am very sorry for that.' 'Yes, sir; do you know they burnt to the middle, and then would burn no longer?' 'You surprise me! What, sir, did they go out?' 'No, sir, no; they burnt shorter.'

THE more honesty a man has the less he affects the air of a saint.

A Forgotten Veteran.

He had been thrown out as a vidette, and for hours he had peeped into the darkness around him to watch for the slightest sign of danger—listened like one who realized that the wily Arab of the desert steals upon his prey with all the silent cunning of the American Indian. As the stars of the night began to pale before the advance of dawn he felt like one reprieved. While he watched, the enemy had, for once, seemed to sleep. Daylight would bring a continuation of the march, and every hour would witness a skirmish, but even a battle does not unnerve a man like standing vidette on a lone and dangerous post.

What! Has he became blind? Daylight now covers the desert, and the vidette is looking towarks the camp of the nignt. There is no camp. At midnight he left 800 of his comrades. This morning there is no sign of life. He looks to the right, but there is no vidette. He looks to the left—no living thing meets his eyes.

He stands and peers and stares and blinks. Is he awake? If so, is he blind? Has the night played some strange trick on him in this land of strange things and strange fancies?

He moves toward the spot where the night halt was made, but he advances slowly and cautiously, and he hesitates now and then as if to reason with himself. Ah! He is neither blind or daft. Here is a cap—there a belt— here a rope—there a sack, to prove that the camp had been here. Here are tracks of men and camels, there a broad trail leading away to the south.

In the stillness of night a messenger had come to the little band, ordering an instant change of march. Quietly and without alarm the men had turned out, the beasts made ready, and the videttes called in. All but one! In the hurry and the darkness he had been overlooked.

Leaning on his carbine and looking over the trail left to show the change of march, the soldier reasoned it all out. His command had been gone for hours. He was alone and on foot. Overtake them! He smiled grimly at the thought. The sun and sand and thirst of Egypt were as deadly enemies as the spears and bullets of the Arabs. He had neither food nor water. A hundred miles of burning sands and hot winds lay between him and a blade of grass—a single drop of water.

The soldier turned to survey the desert plain. To the east, nothing but sand; to the north, nothing but sand; to the west, nothing but sand; to the south—ah! He straightened up, shaded his eyes with his hand, and for a long minute continued his gaze, then he let his arm fall. A score of Arabs were riding down upon him.

Without undue haste—with the dignity befitting an old veteran—the soldier took from his breast and pinned to his coat a medal. Upon its bright side were the words: "The Boer War." He pinned on another which said: "For Services in Zululand." There was a third—a fourth—a fifth. In his twenty years of soldier life the old man had a thousand times been a target for bullets. This was his last campaign. Death was riding down upon him, and he would die like a soldier—as a British soldier.

When the savage horsemen were a half mile away they halted. The old soldier was ready and waiting. There was no thought of taking him a prisoner—no thought of surrender. There was a moment of consultation, and then the bunch of horsemen deployed in line and advanced at a gallop.

Steady, now! Crack! Crack! Crack! Two horsemen tumbled from their saddles—a third reeled about in his seat like a man mortally hit. Before another shot could be fired the murderous lances drank blood and the old soldier lay dead.

On the hot sands, his face upturned to his foes, and his medals shining as never before in a morning sun, lay the old man dead. And then not by the hands of friends—not by the hands of comrades—a sixth medal was placed upon his brawny breast. It was not of gold or silver, but something of more priceless value. It was the words of an Arab chieftain:

"Comrades, a brave man lies here!"

Mr. Beecher on Cooking.

At a concert given for the benefit of the Working Girls' Society, Mr. Beecher, after describing the object of the society to be the education of the working girls in useful branches of knowledge, such as dress-making, cooking, type writing, millinery, etc., said: 'Of dress making, there is no need for me to speak. It comes by nature. But cooking: In all the efforts that are being made known to economize and lift up the ignorant and the working classes of the community there are a great many fundamental elements that must enter in. But the one neglected element of economy is cooking. It is astonishing to think what sort of thing we have to eat, and in what condition. I consider the kitchen as being the devil's own organized kingdom against the kingdom of health in the human family. The want of economy springing from the want of knowledge; the gross food, the greasy food; the want of delicacy and of regard for the fine elements of health and life—it is amazing, it is piteous, it is heathenish. The heathens live better than we do oftentimes in that regard. We do not want any French morality, but we should like some French cuisine—the art of one onion to make a dozen soups, every one of a different flavor; the art of rendering the poorest meat and the cheapest, such as are within the reach of all, into such tasteful and relishful dishes as shall perfectly satisfy the men that gorge themselves with pork and rude beef and all that; and to teach young women how to wisely and economically and delicately to cook is to lay a foundation under their future married life that will avail very much. I would not hold back any moral or religious element, but the kitchen has a great deal to do with grace in civilized circles.'

What the President and the Cabinet Read.

'Who is the best reader in the Cabinet?' a Washington bookseller was asked the other day. 'Folks say Lamar is,' replied the dealer. 'He may be, but I never heard of his buying a book. If he reads he doesn't keep pace with the times. I reckon Bayard is the best reader. He buys a great many books and keeps right along with the best writers. His reading is of a sober, statesman-like character, and he does lots of it. He comes in to buy his own books, and I have never seen him look at a novel. The President, I understand, is a good reader, but the only book I know of his having bought is Blaine's. He bought that a few days after he came to Washington. A great many books go to the WhiteHouse. Col. Lamont buys many good books and nearly all the popular periodicals, but I don't know who reads them. I suppose many are got for Miss Cleveland. Secretary Whitney reads a great deal. He doesn't confine himself however, to politics, history or philosophy. He is very fond of novels and reads many. Some are the best and some are the lightest. He reads such novels as 'The Vagrant Wife,' 'The Tinted Venus,' 'Called Back,' 'Struck Down,' &c. Secretary Endicott reads novels, too. But he never buys anything in English. He always gets French novels and reads a great many of them. The other members of the Cabinet we don't see much of. I guess there is no one in the Cabinet who buys so many good books as Blaine does. He buys everything on sober subjects by well-known authors. He gets much the same books as Bayard does, only the range of his research is wider. Logan isn't anything for buying books.

Historical Trees.

The tree under which William Penn made his treaty with the Indians. The tree on Boston common, where, tradition says, seven tories were hung. Elm tree on Oambridge common under which general Washington first drew his sword as commander-in-chief of the continental army. The charter oak. Pine tree near Fort Edward, N. Y., where Jane McCrea was murdered by the Indians. The thirteen trees planted by Gen. Alexander Hamilton on his estate near New York, representing the original thirteen States. The oak tree at Franklin, N. H., on which Daniel Webster, when a boy, hung his scythe and said to his father, 'Now the scythe hangs to suit me.' The apple tree at Appomattox under which General Grant received the surrender of General Lee.

'OLD man Pennybaker has married again.'

'You don't tell me so.'

'Yes, and he has married a right young girl, forty years younger than he is.'

'Well, I declare. His other wife only died six months ago and he went on so at the grave that I expected that he would loose his mind.'

'Well, you see your prediction has come to pass.'—Texas Siftings.

BY all appearances the silver question will be a "hard nut to crack" for congress.

A BILL providing for the admission of Montana Territory as a state was introduced in senate by Mr. Voorhees during Monday's session.

THE committee on invalid pensions of the House agreed to report in favor of the bill increasing the monthly pensions of widows from $8 to $12.

The Judicial Salary bill was passed. It gives all the United States District Court Judges $5,000 a year, and prohibits them from appointing their relatives to office in their courts.

THE total amount of the appropriation for improving rivers and harbors was limited to $11,000,000, by the respective house committee last Friday. Now for a struggle to divide these $11,000,000 to best advantage among the needy districts.

GOV. CURTIN, after having refused to serve as chairman of an insignificant committee, in justice to himself and his state, is given a place on the committee on naval affairs, A. S. Hewitt having surrendered his place in favor of Curtin. This looks more like business and fairness. Broad statesmanship should always have the preference to factious schemes in filling important house committees.

THE DAUPHIN COUNTY COURT decided against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in the outh Pennsylvania Railroad question. The decision of Judge Simonton meets with almost universal favor, as it compels great railroad corporations to obey the dictates of the constitution as well as other people have to obey it. The Pennsylvania now determines to appeal to the Supreme court, but nobody expects a change of Judge Simonton's decision, except the company itself.

A DISGRACEFUL political action, which very much resembles the election fraud of 1876, was that commited by the Ohio legislature, when they pitched out the democratic members of the Cincinnati district and filled their places with republican rivals and so managed to re elect John Sherman to the United States senate, and avoid the danger of a possible election of the democratic candidate Allen G. Thurman. Then, in order to still the pangs of their consciences, some of the members proposed an amendment to examine the rights of said democratic members to their seats in the legislative halls, and if the examination should result in their favor, to reinstall them. A poor way of throwing sand into the people's eyes.

THE PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION BILL passed the House and the serious question of who shall fill the executive chair in case of the President's and Vice President's death is satisfactorily decided. The bill has the President's approval and signature and is now a law. The Presidency, according to the bill, will after the Vice President, devolve upon the members of the cabinet in the following order—Secretary of State, Secretary of Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney General, Postmaster General, Secretary of Navy and Secretary of Interior. This seems a fair disposal of an important matter, and Congress may be congratulated for getting rid of it at this time. Besides putting seven lives between the presidential chair and the people, it is a most gratifying thought to the democracy that the succession is by this new law securely put within their party. If the law should become part of the constitution yet it would settle the question for all future time.

Presidential Succession.

The Bill Passed Exactly as it Was Adopted by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, January 15.—The House took a whole afternoon's session on the Presidential succession bill and sat continuously until after six o'clock in order to finish it. There was a prior order for an evening's session on pension bills of a private character, but on motion of Mr. Mason, chairman of the pension committee, who stated that there was very little business of that kind ready, the order was vacated. The succession bill was thus pressed to a final vote and was adopted without alteration as it came from the Senate. With the president's signature it will become the law of the land.

Thought it Was an Earthquake.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—An explosion of 250 pounds of dynamite at Ardsley, N. Y., where work on the water tunnel for New York City is in progress, demolished all the buildings near, and shook all the houses in the village. The shock was felt for many miles around, and dispatches detailing an earthquake sensation were sent from all the towns. No one was seriously injured, though there were some narrow escapes.

The Loss by Fire at Beaver Falls.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., January 15.—The Beaver Falls Car Works Foundry and Machine Shops were burned to the ground this morning, together with the Chinese headquarters and every building on the square facing Sixth avenue, except the old Mansion House. The fire started in the foundry, but from what source is not known. It destroyed over $50,000 worth of patterus and rendered four families homeless. The total loss is estimated at from $150,000 te $200,000.

Two Statesmen Seriously Ill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Senator Miller, of California, and Representative Rankin, of Wisconsin, who have both been lying critically ill for some time with Bright's disease of the kidneys, are reported as gradually growing worse. The Senator has been unable to go to the Capitol since his arrival from the Pacific Coast, but Rankin, after a desperate effort, made his appearance upon the first day of the session and was sworn in, though since that time he has been losing strength and his death is expected within a day or two. He is now partially paralyzed and delirious most of the time. Until very recently both patients were reported as improving, and their friends were much gratified, but at the present time the friends of the member from Wisconsin have given up all hope, and the family of the California Senator are anxious about the result of his illness.

Huntingdons Tale of Sorrow.

Severe Weather Compels Worthy People to Appeal for Aid to Sustain Life.

HUNTINGDON, Jan. 17.—There are more hunger and suffering among the poor people of this city this winter than ever before in its history. The recent extremely cold weather has compelled the disclosure of many cases of destitution that were before concealed. There has been scarcely any work for laboring men who have not had regular employment, especially since the building of the water works was suspended, and men of sober and industrious habits have been unable to provide for their families. During previous winters there was a relief society, but now there is no organization of the kind, nor other systematized charity here. The applications to the Directors of the Poor of the county for aid have been unusually numerous, and, because of their number, those officials have become more careful and reluctant than ever in granting it. The industries that have just been revived will employ but a small proportion of those in need of work, and the fact that there are prospects of work for a few is likely to bring more people here than there are places for.

A Sudden Summons.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The community was profoundly shocked yesterday afternoon at the announcement of the death of Miss Katherine Lee Bayard, eldest daughter of the Secretary of State. She received the guests at the large reception at their home last night, and was gayer and more spirited than she had been for some time, as for a week past she had been suffering from a severe cold and neuralgia. The physicians pronounced the cause of her sudden death heart disease.

Miss Katharine Lee Bayard was the eldest of the six daughters, and through the long period during which her mother had been an invalid she had been given all the charge and responsibility of the family. All leaned and depended on her, and her younger sisters had a love and admiration for her that was unusual among sisters. She was a clever and brilliant girl, whose wit and repartee was proverbial; and she was always surprising her friends with some unexpected turn and phase of her character. She was a most fearless rider, and at hunts and riding parties would not hesitate at putting her horse at anything.

The Cabinet circle and society in general will pay respect to Secretary Bayard's family by canceling all engagements of this week.

—MUST GO. The horrible nauseous worm-seed compounds called vermiuges and worm syrups, many of them as worthless as they are obnoxious, have hah their day. It's downright cruelty to compel a child to take them, when Mc Donald's Celebrated Worm Powders, so easy and pleasant to take that children will take them and never know a medicine is being administered, can be procured for the small sum of twenty-five cents. Any case of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded.

Stories of the War

ILLUSTRATED IN EVERY ISSUE.

A Paper for the Homes of the Land—Sparkling and Orignal in Every Feature.

On the First of January a new departure in every feature of the Weekly Times was made. Every number will be liberally illustrated in its War contributions, which have so long been a specialty in its columns, and in its Stories, which will be greatly enlarged from the pens of the best writers, and in current History, Biography, Politics, Art, Science and the leading events of the day.

The time has passed for the weekly journal of the city to fill the place of a newspaper. The daily newspaper from the great centres of news now reaches into every section of the land. Every inland city and every town of importance have their daily newspapers, and the local weekly, with the wonderful progress in provincial journalism, meets every want that the daily newspaper fails to supply. The metropolitan weekly of to-day must be much more than a newspaper; it must be a magazine of family reading; it must lead the magazine in popular literature; it must lead it in popular illustration, and it must meet every requirement of the intelligent reader of every class.

Stories of the War

Will be published in each number from the ablest writers who participated in the bloody drama of civil strife, and each will be profusely illustrated. The most entertaining and instructive Stories from the best writers of fiction will appear in each issue, with illustrations.

—The name of N. H. Downs' still lives, although he has been dead many years. His Elixir for the cure of coughs and colds has already outlived him a quarter of a century, and is still growing in favor with the public.
For sale by J. Spigelmyer, and D. S. Kauffman & Co.

—Two more days have been reserved for public sales, as our readers will see by consulting the sale register. Mr. Henry Keen, from near town, and Mr. Lewis Mensh, of Haines township, were at this office to engage their sale bills. The latter expects to move to Aaronsburg, where he recently purchased the old Harter homestead.

—Ayer's Hair Vigor improves the beauty of the hair and promotes its growth. It imparts an attractive appearance, a delightful and lasting perfume. While it stimulates the roots, cleanses the scalp, and adds elegance to luxuriance, its effects are enduring; and thus it proves itself to be the best and cheapest article for toilet use.

—There was quite an excitement and stir while that party of young folks gathered to betake themselves to Mr. Henry Keen's, west of town, last Thursday evening. A large two-horse sled stood ready for at least an hour in front of Frain's Hotel to convey the jolly crowd to their destination. But the young cavaliers had an immense amount of business—hunting up robes, wraps and getting the necessary supply of candy—which seems to belong to such parties. At last they got off and had a genuine good time, we hear.

COMING.—Kempshall Bro's Swiss Bell Ringers will give one of their celebrated entertainments in the town hall of Millheim, on Friday evening, Jan. 22nd. The performances of this company meet with great favor wherever they go and are endorsed by the press, pulpit and public for refinement and musical skill. From what we read of this company in several of our exchanges we can heartily recommend them to our readers and advise everybody to go and hear them. An enjoyable evening may be expected. Admission 25 cts; children 15 cts.

MILLHEIM'S NEW MARBLE FIRM.—Last week Hon. W. K. Alexander became a partner in the Millheim Marble Works. The new firm will do business under the name of Musser & Alexander. The senior partner, Mr. A. C. Musser, will continue to have charge of the shopwork, while Mr. Alexander proposes to attend to the work of soliciting, delivering and collecting. The gentlemen expect to push the business in the liveliest manner possible, to which we wish them abundant and lasting success. The reputation of the Millheim Marble Works for elegant and substantial work has been established these many years and will no doubt continue so under the new firm.

—The spelling bee of the Excelsior Literary Soriety on Tuesday evening was well attended and proved an amusing exercise. The sides with 18 spellers each were headed by Miss Cora Reifsnyder and Mr. T. M. Osman. The result as announced by the teller, Mr. A. D. Deininger, was 17 for the former and 14 for the latter. It was much regretted by the society that some of the principal members were prevented to be there by unavoidable business somewhere else. It was concluded that future meetings be held on Thursday evenings of every other week. The programme for the next session, Jan. 29th, will be: Scripture Reading, D. G. Smith; Prayer, G. W. Long; Oration, T. M. Osman; Declamation, W. C. Duck; Essay, Miss Annie Rhoads; to be concluded with a debate—Subject, "Resolved that nature is more beautiful than art." Affirmative—G. W. Long, E. Ardery, C. E. Wetzel. Negative—E. E. Bressler, W. F. Smith, F. P. Musser.

LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE.—Tuesday's Bellefonte Daily News prints an account of a meeting which was held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. of that place last Monday evening, and which had for its object the permanent organization of a "Law and Order League of Centre County." The meeting was well attended by citizens of Bellefonte and other parts of the county. The purpose of the organization, as set forth in the following declaration, is to search out violators of the Sunday and Liquor laws and bring them to justice:

The undersigned, citizens of Centre County, agree to organize ourselves into a society to be known as "The Law and Order League of Centre County," whose object shall be to direct the prosecution of proper cases of violations of the Sunday laws, and the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, and to oppose the granting of licenses under existing laws to improper persons or to unnecessary houses, and we pledge to each other our honor and faith.

This declaration was signed by all present and the organization was completed by the election of the following officers:

President, James L. Sommerville.
Vice President, W. T. Twitmire.
Secretary and Treasurer, J. C. Miller.

SMITH TOWN.

Lots of snow and sleighing.

Not less than one hundred new sleighs passed through here since the season opened. It's a salable article just now,

Mrs. Emerick returned to her home in Nittany Valley.

The farmers are making good use of the ice crop.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Duck, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Phil. Stover, were visiting at Spring Mills.

Milton Bright, of Millheim, spent Monday and Tuesday among us.

Mr. James Waugh and daughter, of Blue Ball, we here on Monday on business.

The party last Thursday evening was indeed a nicely arranged affair and the getter up of it deserves much credit. But the person who tried to play a trick on the young folks was not successful, thanks to the one who traveled over the road ahead of the party.

Chas. H. Stover shipped a fine lot of dry picked turkeys to the New York market on last Tuesday.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, 12th and 13th, were busy days for some of our citizens filling their ice houses.

The attendance of the musical convention during last week was not as large as was expected. The closing concert on Saturday evening had a good attendance, considering the inclemency of the weather. The financial result has not been generally reported.

MRS. NYE, widow of Michael Nye, dec'd, is prostrated upon a bed of sickness at her brother's house, John Thomas, east of town. The disease is pneumonia and her recovery is doubtful.

Postmaster Yearick & lady were summoned on last Monday to the sick bed of their grandchild, Miss Annie Mingle, daughter of cashier W. B. Mingle, at Centre Hall. Assistant postmaster, E. Burd, distributes the mail.

A plank walk commencing at the residence of Chas. Bell, in the west end of North 2nd street and running along on said street to connect with the walk in front of the Lutheran church, is under contemplation of being built by some of the citizens of town.

COBURN.

The Lutheran denomination are holding a series of prayer meetings at this place.

The goose question is not yet settled, as we understand, but will be pushed to a final ending soon. Boys, if you have killed the man's geese it would be no more than fair, if you would pay for them.

Coburn has a new tonsorial artist, and a gentleman of color, too.

Sleighing parties are very popular in Coburn just now. The one up the creek this [Wednesday] evening is to be a rouser. We may report in full next week.

The "stag" sleighing party from this place to Rebersburg last Thursday evening was well enjoyed by all the participants.

The new Lutheran church at this place have applied for a charter and will receive it this week some time. The officers elected are as follows; Elder, Mr. John A. Seriff, Trustee, Mr. W. H. Kreamer; Treasurer, Mr. John Bowersox; Secretary, W. H. Kreamer. They have about forty members enrolled and all are enthusiastic and pleased with their start. They have a beautiful church site on which they propose erecting a church edifice some time in the future. We congratulate them.

Since there is sleighing our grain merchants are kept very busy handling grain and coal. Coburn is doing a very good business. Her business should be represented in the advertising columns of the JOURNAL, and we think could be if "worked up." The JOURNAL is a great favorite here as a local paper.

The new story, by Capt. John Smith, can be had by applying to Mr. Henry Whitmer. It is a favorite. Title: "Fifteen years of wedded life."

There should be a Union Sunday School organized at this place for the benefit of the many small children. Z.

WOODWARD.

J. C. Motz, Esq., should be congratulated in retaining Andrew Moyer, as miller. His work gives universal satisfaction.

W. R. Ettinger showed us a small steam engine which he manufactured. In the way of contrivances, some day something will emerge from William's brain that will revolutionize steam itself.

Were Fremont, the famous path finder still living, I am sure from Sunday's achievement he would envy our esteemed friend, Mr. Mallory. Think of walking ten miles and never getting off the road, with scarcely a fence visible.

Among the obituaries we might mention J. Willis Musser's horse.

Our shoemaker went off and got married..

Kansas Letter.

WILLINGTON, Sumner Co., Kansas, Jan 11th, 1886.

As we hardly ever see anything in your paper about this part of the world, a few lines of Southern Kansas might possibly be of some interest to your many readers. The Journal reaches us on Monday each week, and is eagerly read by all. We had our first cold snap for this season the first week in December. It came in the shape of snow about twelve inches deep and lasted but a few days. All of Christmas week you could see farmers plowing or husking corn in their shirt sleeves. But on the seventeenth of this month the weather changed hands or something. Well, it was a regular blizzard and no discount. It struck us about 4 o'clock in the morning and lasted twenty-four hours. The snow was fine enough to pass through the eye of a needle and as sharp as a Coburn grain dealer. 12° below zero, on the sunny side of the dug-out was the best we could get on that day. But yesterday the sun was out in all his Sunday glory, and shone as he can in sunny Kansas only. Enough of this, the signal service bureau will take care of the weather.

In 1871 the first settlers notified the buffalo and the Indian to go, and they went. In 1872 the county was organized and named Sumner. In 1874 the grasshopper took possession and ate up all that was good enough for a hopper to eat. The first settler returned home in that year and in 1875 came back and brought some of his friends along. The hopper had hopped from that year up to date. This county was just hopping along, and to-day—counting babies in—we could hop about thirty-five thousand strong.

Three shanties then constituted the county seat, they called it "Wellington." It was planted on Slate Creek, in the great and fertile Arkansas valley. It has grown up to be a city of seven thousand people. It has two main line railroads and one branch road, with good prospects for one or more through lines in the near future. A street railway has just been completed on two of its main streets. It has six churches, four schoolhouses, containing twenty three rooms heated by hot air furnaces and finished in first-class style. There are fifteen hotels, several of them equal to your "Brokerhoff" or "Bush House" and as many boarding houses and restaurants. More than 150 rooms are occupied as business places, many of them not surpassed in size and elegance west of the great river. Besides the "Queen City" of Kansas we have eighteen other towns, containing from two hundred to two thousand people. All the land started at $1.25 an acre and all of it has increased ten times that much and a great deal of it more than fifty times. Crops have been fair for several years past, and this county would take the contract to beat the world for corn, hogs and cattle.

Coal was struck in the north part of this county, and the wise ones say we will have coal in abundance. If that is so then our basket is full. Cheap coal is what we want. Soft coal sells now at $4.25 and hard at $13 per ton. It is somewhat singular that so many hard working people in the East with no homes—and no prospects of ever getting one—don't come out here where land is to be had for the asking, and it would be well for many an eastern man to keep in readiness when "Oklahomo" is opened up for settlement. Though it would spoil one of the best hunting grounds we have, yet we are good hearted enough, in order to see our friends well fixed there, and, if I live when the proclamation is issued, I shall go down there and pick out the finest quarter section for me, and welcome all my friends to the rest. Hurrah for Oklahoma! Yours,

SAM. E. ERHARD.

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

A "Handy" Hint for Wash-day.

Here is a capital hint from Pauline Adelaide Handy, who writes in "Good Housekeeping" on the preservation of the hands: "Many housekeepers have rough hands in winter, which grow very painful, cracking open on the knuckles, the cracks extending into the palms of the hands. They take their hands out of hot soapsuds, or starch, to hang clothes in the wind. If they do not use hot water, and the hands were thoroughly dried before going out, this would be avoided. A pair of white woolen stockings, cut off rounding at the ankle and sewed across with a thumb sewed in, makes a very comfortable pair of mittens for hanging up and taking off clothes. Pin them fast to the sleeves with large safety pins, before going out, having first stretched the arm upward, then they will not come loose and the wrists will be protected. After bringing in the clothes, if the mittens are put in the clothes-pin bag they will be kept clean and in the right place.

Hands are injured in very cold weather by lack of protection at the wrists, as large veins and arteries are exposed. The blood is chilled in passing into the hands. Everyone cannot have handsome, white and shapely hands, but everyone can have clean and comfortable hands."

SOME persons are of the opinion that the first writing was done upon thin pieces of wood, which is very probable. Such boards were used at an early period by the Greeks and Romans, and were frequently covered with wax—which was, of course, more readily written on than the bare wood; but as such writing was easily obliterated, it was used chiefly for temporary purposes. When wax was employed, any errors were easily erased by rubbing them with the blunt end of the piece of metal which served for a pen. To make the characters more legible, it appears that some black substance was smeared over the surface of the white wax, which remained in the scratched marks. The convenience of this caused the practice to be continued long after the introduction of other materials. Leaves of trees were used in ancient times by the Egyptians, and probably by the Greeks. The Hindoos continued the use of this species of writing material until within a very few centuries. The leaves of some Asiatic trees were, from their size and smoothness, admirably adapted for books. If we may judge from the name of leaf being still applied to the sheet of paper books, we should imagine that tree leaves were formerly the principle material used in fashioning volumes.

He Turned the Page.

A popular physician was much pleased with a certain acrated water, and, by his assiduous recommendations, procured for it a celebrity it justly deserved. The doctor acted solely in the interests of humanity generally and expected no return. To his surprise there came one morning an effusive letter from the company stating that his recommendations had done them so much good that they "ventured to send him a hundred—' Here the page came to an end. "This will never do," said the doctor. "It is very kind, but I could not think of accepting anything." Here he turned the page, and found the sentence ran—"of our circulars for distribution."

"Can't you give me another pail to put your milk in?" said the milkman to the girl the other morning. "Why, what's the matter with the one you've got in your hand?" "Why, it leaks. I want one that's watertight." The girl went to get one, but she thought much as she went.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

QUAKER Is the Best TABLE SAUCE.

Thousands of articles are now manufactured that in former years had to be imported, paying high import duty as it is now being done on Lea & Perrins table sauce; the QUAKER TABLE SAUCE takes its place; it has been pronounced by competent judges just as good and even better. The QUAKER SAUCE has slowly but surely gained great importance and is replacing the very best imported sauce on the shelf of the grocer, the tables of the restaurant and the tables of the rich and poor men, greatly prized and relished by all on account of its piquancy, aroma, taste, strength and pureness. The inventor has by years of study of the secret virtues contained in the aromatic spices of the Indies and China, such as mace, nutmeg, cinnamon, genuine Jamaica ginger, and peppers and buds of trees unknown to most men, and by long practice succeeded to combine their extracts in such a liquid form as we now find it, of agreeable taste, and so invigorating as to be taken in place of stomach bitters. By manufacturing this sauce here, heavy import duties and freights are saved, and it is sold at a lower figure to the dealer, who making a better profit on Quaker Sauce can sell it to the consumer cheaper than he very best imported article hardly equaling ours. If your grocer does not keep it, write us for prices, etc. Sold in bottles or by the gallon.
